A Sign-Board. I will paint you a sign, rum-seller, And hang it above your door ; truer and better sign-board Than ever you had before. will paint with the skill of a master, And many shall pause to rec This wonderful piece of painting, So like the reality.

As you wait for that fair young bey, Just in the morn of manhood, A mother's pride and joy. He has no thought of stopping, But you greet him with a smile, And you seem so blithe and friendly That he pauses to chat awhile.

I will paint yourself, rum-seller,

I will paint you again, rum-seller, I will paint you as you stand, With a foaming glass of liquor Holding in either hand. He wavers, but you urge him; "Drink! pledge me just this one!" And be lifts the glass and drinks it, And the hellish work is done,

And the next I will paint a drunkard; Only a year has flown, But futo this louthsome creature This fair young boy has grown. The work was quick and rapid ; I will paint nim as he lies. In a torpid, drunken slumber, Under the wintry skies.

I will paint the form of the mother As she kneels at her darling's side-Her beautiful boy that was dearer Than all the world beside. I will paint the shape of a coffin Labelled with the one word "Lost!" I will paint all this, rum-seller, And paint it free of cost,

The sin, and the shame, and sorrow, The crime and want and woe, That is born there in your rum-shop, No hand can print, you know ; But I'll pain't you a sign, rum-seller, And many shall pause to view This wonderful swinging sign-board, So terribly, fearfully true, .

Party Virtue.

The vote in the House of Representatives at Washington, a few weeks ago, by which that body refused the appointment of a committee to prepare articles of impeachment against the Vice-President of the United States, was one of the most unpleasanly suggestive votes ever recorded in this country. Either the Vice-President was evidently deserving of so high a proceeding against him, or he was not. There was not a fact of his case which was not as well known to one member as another. There was not a member of that body, unless he had deliberately chosen to be ignorant, who had not come to an intelligent conclusion concerning the Vice-President's guilt or innocence of the charges that had been preferred against him. It was a plain question of fact, on which an unbiased jury of ordinary intelligence could have had no difficulty in coming to a just conclusion; yet one of the highest deliberative bodies in the land voted upon it almost exclusively according to party prejudices and affiliations. Half a dozen republicans, whose motives, at least, were open to suspicion, voted with the solid array of democratic mem- slider! bers against the Vice-President, while the republicans, as an overwhelming and controlling majority, declared by their vote that that offldisgrace sought to be inflicted.

The country is thus left in doubt as to the real merits of the case, from this vote than it would from the decision of a debating club of boys. One of these parties has evi- day.' dently lied, or borne false witness for or against a man hitherto considered eminent for his personal virtues. It is sad to conclude that so high a body as the House of Representatives is entirely untrustworthy in its dealings with a question of public morality and personal rectitude .-The country may well ask, in view of this vote: "If they do these "I don't insist on it," said he; but those who fancy that they can they do in the dry?"
